Fellowship Hall Interior View

This major addition and renovation of an established church is sited directly across the street from Seattle Pacific University. Seattle's zoning codes required that the new building be separated from the existing.

The new building contains a gymnasium and a large multi-purpose room, which can be divided into classrooms, or opened up for use as a fellowship hall or banquet facility. The new building is designed to clearly be a part of the existing church complex, yet have a distinctly contemporary statement.
